Finally! A place to air your family secret anonymously and be set free!
<http://blog.myfamilysecrets.org> launched successfully.

Dallas, TX, February 4, 2009. Award-winning Author Mary DeMuth is passionate about helping people experience genuine freedom from their family secrets. So she's launched a new website to help people post their secrets anonymously in conjunction with her latest fiction release Daisy Chain.

Mary says, "So many of us live with secrets that haunt us, keep us awake at night, or noodle their way into our lives. Some secrets are funny (think: embarrassing moments). Some are tragic. But many hold us captive. In my latest novel Daisy Chain, many characters harbor secrets, but only a few are brave enough to bring them to the light of day and find freedom. All secrets will be kept anonymous, and will be posted with discretion. It's my hope that this site will become a community for many, and that thousands of folks will experience freedom when they've shared their family secret."

My Family Secrets is about turning trials to triumph, about bringing hope to those who've carried a secret far too long. Visit <http://blog.myfamilysecrets.org> to post your own family secrets and start the healing process. All secrets will be kept anonymous and will be posted with discretion.

Mary DeMuth loves to write about turning trials to triumph. Her debut novel, Watching the Tree Limbs, was a Christy Award finalist. Both it and its sequel Wishing on Dandelions were finalists for the American Christian Fiction Writers Book of the Year. Mary's nonfiction books include Ordinary Mom, Extraordinary God, Building the Christian Family You Never Had and Authentic Parenting in a Postmodern Culture. Mary recently moved back to Texas after spending two and a half years working in southern France with her husband Patrick and their three children. Visit her at <http://www.marydemuth.com>
